STATEN ISLAND COMMUNITY CHARTER SCHOOL
HITS SEPTEMBER ENROLLMENT TARGETS; ONLY TWO FIRST-GRADE SEATS LEFT!

At the final enrollment session conducted by Staten Island Community Charter School (SICCS) at the Staten Island Museum on Saturday, June 12, a total of 16 students were signed up for fall classes--11 for kindergarten and five for first grade. That's only two shy of the school's goal of 100 students expected to attend the new school when it opens on September 13, sharing space with Trinity Lutheran School, Stapleton Heights.

"Originally, we planned to have two classes of 25 each in kindergarten, and two of 25 each in first grade," said Lorna Harris of Silver Lake, president of the charter school's board of trustees. "But the demand in the community was for kindergarten." In response, Harris said, the board reconfigured the enrollment, which now consists of three kindergarten classes and one first-grade class, each with 25 students.

"All we need to complete our enrollment are two additional first-grade students," Harris said. She encouraged interested parents of prospective first-graders to visit the school's blog for further information on the school and on how to enroll.
